Michael, Yep, definitely one of the alternative species I have been known to cast too. That pattern for the damsel is so deadly I have had damsel's try to mate with it causing much commotion by trouts trying to get a double dip;-) Sort of bait fishing when you have one live fly trying to mate with an artificial, Shame on me but that is how mother nature works at times.

While DSLR cameras are technically superior, the quality of any photo mostly depends on the photographer's intent and creative vision. As photographers we often get caught up buying the latest photo gear thinking that it will help us take better photos, while no camera can take a good photo without the photographer's ideas.
